Hi Robert,

My name is Anne Riddle, and I'm a research assistant at Resources for the Future, an environmental economics research institute in DC. In 2004 we completed a comprehensive database of water quality trading and offsetting programs in the U.S., which we are now in the process of updating. We had heard about the program where DNREC allowed a Vlasic Foods plants to offset its nutrient discharges through ecosystem restoration, but haven't been able to find much information on the program. If you know of a good source for documentation, could you please point us in the right direction? If I've reached the wrong person, I apologize. Thanks in advance for your time and attention.
